CHURCHWIDE:

The Episcopal Church's Task Force on the Study of Marriage announced Jan. 22 that it has mapped out its work for the next triennium. The task force, at its recent first meeting, addressed its charge from Resolution A037 from the 2015 General Convention, and has divided into four working groups that will:

- consult with and listen to people living some of the “changing trends and norms” that Resolution A037 asked the task force to examine;
- study and write short documents about marriage and other relationships using various disciplines, and solicit responses to them from a range of perspectives;
- monitor the impact of same-sex marriage upon congregations, the Episcopal Church and Anglican and ecumenical partners; and
- promote the use of the Dearly Beloved Toolkit (both text and PowerPoint slides available here) and essays for congregational and diocesan conversation, and monitor the ongoing discussion about the relationship between the church and the state in regard to weddings.
